Creating a Culture of Collaboration with Clients to share our successes and challenges and to get your feedback

We need your help!

Your input will help us create the next phase of this work

Background:

Over the last two years, the Department has leveraged grant funding from The Colorado Health Foundation (TCHF) to integrate person-centered principles into Department business processes, policies and partnerships.

In 2012, the Department received grant funding from TCHF and engaged the Institute for Patient- and Family-Centered Care (IPFCC) to evaluate and provide recommendations on how we can be more aligned with principles of Patient- and Family-Centeredness. Following the recommendations of the IPFCC, and with subsequent funding from TCHF in 2014, the Department began to implement the recommendations. As the effort expanded, we developed a client-only Advisory Council, an internal Person-Centeredness Champions group, and a Strategic Plan for person-centeredness to help guide our work and how we provide services. The Department defines a “person-centered approach” as thinking and behaving in ways that respect and value other people’s individual preferences, strengths, and contributions. Please see our Overview of Grant Efforts and Accomplishments report.

Note: This presentation will focus on the Department’s broader person- and family-centeredness accomplishments as supported by a grant from TCHF. Due to room limitations, in person participation is capped at 50. We ask that organizations send only one representative. A webinar option is also available and will be recorded and made available online. Registration Link
